MEMBERSHIP OF DIXON Y INCREASING

Fifty Per Cent Growth in Year Shown by Annual Report

The fiscal year of the Dixon Y. M. C. A. closed April 30 and the annual reports that are compiled and sent in to the national offices to New York show some interesting facts. The membership of this local "Y" has greatly increased from a total of 557 one year ago to 736 this year. This shows practically a 50% increase. This number is made up of 256 men 36 years or over, 143 between the ages of 18 and 24, 223 boys between 12 and 17, and 11 in the Ladies' Department. The activities of the "Y" have been directed by a total number of 143 men and boys. These have served in the capacities of directors or committee-men and do not include any special committees of short standing.

There are ten clubs, which include seven for boys, two for young men and one for business men. These clubs have a total membership of 237, who are regular members of the club and do not include the number of Y. M. C. A. members in special activities. These special social affairs include a total of 180 entertainments or lectures. Sixty-one boys were in camp.

In Physical Dept. In addition to these in the Physical Department 216 men and boys have been enrolled in classes. There have been 632 sessions for these classes, with a total attendance of 264 each class. The swimming pool shows still a larger number using the swimming privileges and include a total attendance of men of 1494 and 4653 boys, showing a total use of 6152. Of this number, 28 were taught swimming and 20 life saving.

From an educational standpoint, exactly 50 lectures have been given during the year at the Association with a total enrollment of 160. The local "Y" does not conduct a night school or business course as most Associations do because it does not have the facilities for this work.

Religious Work In the Religious Department two classes have been given in leadership training with 28 students enrolled and a total attendance including students and friends of 36 men and 216 boys. Nine Bible classes and life problem discussion were conducted with an enrollment of 156 making a total attendance for the year of 1170. A series of Sunday afternoon meetings was held for men with a total attendance of 210. But possibly the greatest work in the Religious Department were the interviews for personal religious life, 246 of these interviews were given, which resulted in sixteen decisions for the Christian life and eight joining the church.

Interesting Figures Other interesting figures taken from the annual report of the Dixon work include: Weekly factory nights, 10. Total attendance, 2460. Father and Son Banquet. Mother and Daughter Banquet. Mother and Son Banquet. Basketball games, 294. Total attendance, 3550. Volley ball games, 127. Total attendance, 1450. Baseball game William Rose investment. Abandoned Car Found Near Franklin Today A Buick coupe was abandoned near the Ernest Pettinger farm, about three miles west of Franklin Grove at an early hour this morning. The car bore one license plate which was issued for a Nash car to Philip K. Nelson, 536 Belten avenue, Chicago. One tire was flat and the gasoline tank was almost empty, which indicated that the car had been abandoned and backed in on a side road off the Lincoln Highway. Deputy Sheriff William Rose investigated the case early this morning and had the car towed to a local garage, notifying the Chicago detective bureau. The car is believed to have been stolen from Chicago last night.

BAGGAGEMAN AT STERLING HELD UP AND MAIL STOLEN

Two Bandits Got Pouch of Railroad Mail, Valueless

Two unmasked men held up, slugged and robbed Enos Carr, Chicago & North Western depot baggageman, at Sterling Thursday night, and escaped with a single pouch of railroad mail. The mail is valuable only to the railroad.

The bandits escaped in a high-powered car, apparently in the belief that the pouch contained money or valuables, and they are still at large. C. & N. W. passenger train No. 11, arriving there at 8:55 p. m. carries a single pouch of railroad mail, which is transferred to the Peoria train in the morning.

It was the habit of Carr to deliver this pouch to the ticket agent and as he entered the waiting room on his way to the ticket office he was met by a well dressed young man, who pressed a revolver against his heart, and ordered him to yield the pouch.

Carr, himself a jovial personality, thought some one was playing a joke on him, and he laughingly pushed the youth away. The butt end of the pistol came down on Carr's head with terrific force, momentarily stunning him. Authorities believe the holdup is the work of local talent who had observed Carr's practice of handling this mail pouch, but who were not acquainted with the fact that it contained only railroad mail.

NEW PROHIBITION ORDER DRAWS IRE OF CONGRESSMEN

Called "Outrage" and "Un-constitutional" by Senators

BULLETIN Washington, May 22—(AP)—Use of local police and sheriffs as federal prohibition agents, made possible under an order issued yesterday by President Coolidge, will be confined for the present California. Assistant Secretary Andrews, in charge of prohibition enforcement decided today. To what extent the order will be utilized if the California experiment proves successful has not been decided, Mr. Andrews said. He added, however, that a nation-wide enlistment of state, county and city police as prohibition agents was not contemplated. Defending the order, which has been severely criticized by a number of senators, the assistant secretary declared "this is not the time to talk about state's rights so far as prohibition is concerned."

Washington, May 22—(AP)—Difficulties are bobbing up in the path of the government's latest move in the effort to enforce prohibition through greater use of local police. Senator Bruce, democrat of Maryland, described as an "outrage" the executive order authorizing appointment of state, county and municipal police as federal prohibition agents. It was further characterized by Governor Ritchie of the same state as "a clear attempt of the federal government to dictate to the state what should be the duties of its local officers."

On the other hand, James E. Jones, director of prohibition, said the purpose of the order was to bring about greater cooperation between federal and local authorities and to give the latter authority which would enable them to ignore city, county and state lines in pursuit of persons suspected of violating the prohibition laws. The order issued yesterday by the White House immediately drew fire in the Senate, not only from wet leaders, but from others who questioned its constitutionality. Senators Goff, republican of West Virginia, former assistant attorney general and King, democrat of Utah, were among those who held it was unconstitutional, but Senator Walsh, democrat, Montana, took the opposite view. He and Senator King are both members of the judiciary committee.

Its Official Title The order issued yesterday by President Coolidge authorizing the employment of state, county and municipal officers as federal prohibition agents, is officially entitled an amendment to an executive order signed by President Grant in 1873 during the readjustment period after the Civil War.

In the order of 1873 Grant said: "With but few exceptions the holding of two such offices by the same person is incompatible with a due and faithful discharge of the duty of either office; it frequently gives rise to great inconvenience and often results in detriment to the public service; and moreover, is not in harmony with the genius of the government." Grand excepted from this order the office of deputy marshal which, he said, might be conferred upon sheriffs and deputy sheriffs. He also excepted deputy postmasters.

ASK RUSSELL SCOTT BE RETURNED TO BE HANGED

NORTH SIDERS EXPRESS VIEW ON PAVEMENTS

Public Hearing, Held Friday Evening, Well Attended

About 50 property owners residing on the north side along the streets proposed for improvement with paving, met at the city hall last evening at a special meeting called by Mayor Frank D. Palmer, for the purpose of securing the desires of the citizens as to the class of pavement favored. An expert on asphalt paving from Chicago was present and addressed the meeting, which was attended by the members of the board of local improvements.

The majority of the property owners were in favor of concrete paving on the streets under consideration, although several were in favor of filling up the holes in the present macadam, and then placing a patented surfacing, which it was pointed out will serve for some years. Streets under consideration for paving by the board of local improvements are East Chamberlain street from Galena avenue to the entrance of Assembly park, Everett street from Galena to Hinton avenue, Boyd street from Galena avenue to North Jefferson avenue, Belmont, Ottawa and Dixon avenues. Another meeting will be held Friday evening of next week for a further hearing of opinions from the property owners.

Seek Strangers for Setting Straw Stack in May Town Affire

An appeal for bloodhounds to assist in tracking down two unknown men who are alleged to have been responsible for the burning of a huge straw stack on the farm of Lloyd McGuirk in May township, was received at the sheriff's office yesterday afternoon at 3 o'clock. The owner of the farm telephoned, stating that two strange men were seen running away from the straw stack shortly after the blaze was discovered but could give no definite description of the pair. A later telephone call advised against the sending of bloodhounds to the McGuirk farm on account of a heavy rain which fell. The straw stack was completely consumed, the owner claiming heavy loss.

Announcement of the award last night was made by the judges. SESSIONS OF PAROLE BOARD WILL BE OPEN TO DIRECTOR OF CRIME COMMISSION RESULT OF PARLEY

Furore Caused by Grand Jury Investigation Brings Results

Chicago, May 22—(AP)—Chicago criminals have been paroled, pardoned and discharged from Joliet penitentiary at a faster rate than the courts could send them there, the special crime grand jury in session here has been told.

The statement was made by Henry B. Chamberlain, operating director of the Chicago Crime Commission, who will be permitted to attend all future sessions of the Board of Parole under an agreement reached early today at a conference of Will Colvin and Chauncey Jenkins, state prison system officials and Attorney General Carlstrom and State's Attorney Crowe. Chamberlain will attend the meetings both as representative of the Crime Commission and as a special state's attorney will be counseled on all paroles and permitted to offer evidence and objections to releasing convicts.

Rescinds Old Rule

Three years ago the parole board, of which Colvin is chairman, passed an order denying the Crime Commission access to the records and hearings it had previously enjoyed. The order followed a commission report on the freeing of criminals. Both Jenkins, who is head of the state Welfare Department, and Colvin already have testified before the Will county grand jury at Joliet which is investigating prison conditions as a result of the recent murder of Deputy Warden Klein at Stateville penitentiary. They have been summoned by the Chicago jury and are expected to testify next week. Basing his testimony on statistics he compiled, Chamberlain yesterday told the jury that in 1923 there were 442 county convicts released from the penitentiary by pardon, parole or discharge while 379 convicts were sentenced to prison.

Cites Alleged Figures

More than 82 percent of those released from Joliet were pardoned or paroled, Chamberlain claimed, and about 18 percent served the sentences imposed by Chicago courts and juries. In 1923, the witness said, 253 prisoners were sent from Chicago to the Pontiac Reformatory and 257 were freed by pardon and parole, regular discharges not being included. Figures submitted the jury by Chamberlain indicated many of the released prisoners had been convicted of violent crimes. The percentage of convictions increased during the period covered by his figures, the witness said.

Gov. Small Summoned

An unexpected development came in the Will county inquiry yesterday when the jurors voted to summon Governor Len Small in their effort to thoroughly sift the numerous charges, denials, reports and rumors resulting from the prison investigation. The governor consented to appear next Tuesday when the jury reconvenes and expressed his desire to aid the inquiry in every possible way. The claim of Warden Whitman of Joliet penitentiary that he was warned in name only was denied, according to reports, by Jenkins and Colvin.

PADEREWSKI MAY BE CANDIDATE TO LEAD POLAND

Noted Pianist Sailed From New York on Unknown Mission

Berlin, May 22—(AP)—Dispatches to the Berliner Tageblatt from Warsaw report that Ignace Jan Paderewski, famous pianist, will be a candidate for president of the Polish republic. Some of the papers have reported that Paderewski had arrived at Posen from the United States and was conferring with leaders of the conservative party.

(These latter reports are obviously incorrect since Paderewski only was booked to sail from New York today.)

DISCOUNTED AT LEGATION

Washington, May 22—(AP)—No political significance is attached by the Polish legation here to the departure of Ignace Jan Paderewski for Europe today.

It was said that the pianist had sailed for Switzerland where he spends much of his time and that his trip was on advice of his physician.

New York, May 22—(AP)—Ignace Jan Paderewski, famous pianist and former premier of Poland, sailed today for an unannounced destination, while still showing the ravages of a severe illness which has kept him confined to his hotel for several weeks. In answer to questions, he said he was not going to Poland, but refused to name his destination. He also refused to talk of the situation in Poland. At the hotel, it was said that Paderewski had given no intimation on leaving what connection there might be between his departure and the present condition of affairs in Poland. When Paderewski was premier, Pilsudski, who has recently assumed leadership in the country, was for a short period a government official under the musician-statesman.

STATE ACTS TO EXECUTE MAN WHO IS SANE

Court Asked to Enforce Original Sentence of Court

Chicago, May 22—(AP)—The return to Cook county of Russell Scott from the Chester Asylum for the Insane says that the alienist know of no legal reason why the original sentence imposed against Scott, who was saved from the gallows only a few hours before the hour set for his execution should not be carried out.

The petition was presented to Judge Brothers, acting chief justice of the criminal court by First Assistant State's Attorney Gorman and was made returnable next Tuesday. It was directed to Dr. Frank A. Stubblefield, superintendent of the Chester institution, where Scott has been confined since he was found insane by a jury. The petitioners were Attorney General Carlstrom and State's Attorney Crowe.

The report of the three alienists who examined Scott last Tuesday says that the alienist know of no legal reason why the original sentence imposed against Scott, who was saved from the gallows only a few hours before the hour set for his execution should not be carried out.

Miss Gladys Plum to Wed John L. Clayton

An elaborate announcement party was given Thursday by Mrs. John D. Plum and Mrs. R. O. Blough, in honor of their daughter and sister, Miss Gladys Plum, a teacher in the Rock Falls elementary schools, who will be a June bride. The delightful affair took place at the beautiful and spacious country home of Miss Plum's parents, which is five miles north of Polo. Eleven Sterling and Rock Falls girls, intimate friends and co-workers of the bride-to-be, were the invited guests. They motored to the Plum home early in the evening where they were most hospitably received. Baskets of gorgeous purple and white lilacs and other spring blossoms decorated the rooms of the house. The girls were seated in a most attractive and enjoyable manner at card tables, where they played auction bridge. High score for the bridge games was held by Miss Wilda Hall, who received the first prize. The consolation prize went to Miss Atha Hall, who held the lowest score.

Later in the evening the girls were invited into the dining room, where covers were laid for 12 at one large table. Yellow and white, the bride-to-be's chosen colors, were attractively used in carrying out the pretty table decorations. Two baskets of hand-some yellow and white daisies adorned the ends of the table, and a large and art food cake graced the center.

The nut cups were made from white crepe paper and attached to them was a most unique resemblance of an owl. Under his wing the wise owl carried a small missive which proved to be a very interesting bit of news for the guests. The missive announced the approaching marriage of Miss Plum and John L. Clayton of Yorkville, Ill., which event will take place on Sunday, June 27. The favors for the guests were dainty bouquets of yellow and white daisies.

A delicious two-course lunch was served by the two hostesses. The girls departed for their homeward trip following lunch, expressing many thanks to the hostesses for the lovely evening, and extending their best wishes to the bride-to-be. The guests invited were Misses Julia Krenwinkle, Charbel Stephenson, Wilda Hall, Atha Hall, Merle Golder, Betty Rhinehart, Amy Carley, Aile Beckman, Jeannette Balderston and Lucille Lickhard and Mrs. Elmer Janessen.

Menus for the Family

BY SISTER MARY

Breakfast—Sliced bananas and strawberries with shredded wheat biscuits, thin cream, poached eggs on graham toast, milk, coffee.

Luncheon—Baked spinach, rye bread, jelly, drop molasses cookies, milk, tea.

Dinner—Stuffed mutton chops, rice in tomato sauce, water cress and orange salad, rhubarb and strawberry pie, whole wheat bread, milk, coffee. The breakfast cereal is not planned for small children who should be served their usual well cooked cereal. But if you have never tried the combination of bananas and strawberries with a "shredder" you have a delightful surprise in store for you. The mildness of the banana and the tartness of the strawberry are perfect together.

Rhubarb and Strawberries.
One cup diced rhubarb, 1 cup diced strawberries, 1 cup sugar, ½ cup sifted dried bread crumbs, 1 egg, 1 rule pin pastry.

Line a deep dish with plain pastry. Mix crumbs and sugar thoroughly and sprinkle bottom of pie with 2 tablespoonfuls of the mixture. The rhubarb is washed and peeled and cut into one-inch pieces before measuring. Combine rhubarb and strawberries with remaining sugar and crumbs and stir in egg slightly beaten. Put mixture into pie shell and the edge of the shell with water. Flt top crust in place and press edges firmly together. Trim and "crimp" and put into a hot oven. Reduce heat at the end of 15 minutes and bake in a moderate oven for 25 minutes.

BY CYNTHIA GREY—
"The successful business woman is not a successful wife," the reactionaries are crying. "No man likes an independent woman."

They use the latter statement as a weapon to crush those rash feminine centaurs into the taboos of fields of business and the arts.

There are some extremists who warn self-supporting wives that their husbands may take to other women of dependent, gold digger type, as a relief from the woman who need none of their support and who give them little admiration.

"What profiteth a woman if she gain her independence and lose her man?" shout the evangelists. "Man requires dependence in woman, and cannot be true to a self-assertive wife who makes as much money as he does."

Are the reactionaries preaching that woman must lay down her brains her large and her individual personality on the altar of a man's pleasure? Do they mean that woman so craves a mate that she will give up his very interest, just to cater to his vanity?

If that is what they mean, they are twenty years behind the times. Two decades ago, perhaps, man did mean that much to woman, simply because she had never tasted the forbidden fruits of stimulating individual work.

But today—a glance around the business world will discover millions of women who are taking a chance on losing their men, for the sake of their business careers. It is not that woman no longer cares for marriage and children. It is only that now she also cares for other things. She has found some world outside the biological sex world that held her captive so many centuries.

And it will be hard to force her back into bondage. Granted that mate hunger is strong, work hunger is stronger also. Psychologists place the two instincts on a level of importance. It is not inexplicable, then, that a certain proportion of the female world should yield to the work hunger at the expense of sex life. Woman will always be interested in love. But as her other interests increase, she will not so often yield up her whole life to love.

It is undoubtedly true that business independence lessens woman's attraction for certain men. Perhaps some husbands will hurry off to spend their money on clinging vines, because their wives make their own money. But that sort of man would be a pretty poor good for a woman to sacrifice her life to.

The WOMAN'S DAY by Allene Sumner

Careers and Canning.
A dozen or so of our nation's most prominent mothers have been questioned of late as to the relative supremacy of the job of home making. It is interesting to note that practically every one of the women, from Billie Burke to Nina Wilcox Putnam, say "not child OR career," but "child AND career." In other words they swashbuckle at this idea that home takes all of a woman's interest and time, or that home is neglected if she works.

Where'd Ja Get 'Em?
In theory, I agree. Women of ability SHOULD be able to take care of home and child, and yet have other work and interests, too, paying with the money they earn in their own sphere for the work done by cook or maid or nursemaid in her sphere. The theory is good. In practice, I have seen it fail dismally. All because the cook and maid and nursemaid cannot be found who do their work as well as the wage-earning mother does hers. These women celebrities must have some mysterious control of the servant problem that lesser mortals know not of.

Snakes and Babies.
A rattlesnake bit a woman of Arizona. She slit the wound with a knife to suck out the poison. Her knife slipped and she cut an artery. No help was at hand. She fired shots but no one came to help her. Seeing that death from bleeding was near, and fearing that her little children would die of starvation before their father returned, she shot them and herself.

Some senators and congressmen are still growing over the national maternity appropriation which, under the Sheppard-Towner law, spends hundreds of thousands of dollars yearly to protect American women living in isolated places at time of maternity.

"No woman in this country today is so far from scientific aid that this is necessary," says a growler.

Let Her Chew!
It may not be long before advisers of young girls will be squealed by science when they attempt to say that "no lady chews gum."

Chewing gum as an after-treatment for tonsil removal is advocated by a London surgeon. He explains that chewing stimulates the secretion of saliva, which, bathing the wounded surfaces, aids in healing.

If Not Gum, Caramels!
For those who prefer to chew something other than gum there are succulent caramels. Made by boiling 3 cups of sugar, 1 cup milk, 2 squares chocolate, 3 tablespoons butter, until it forms a soft ball in cold water, 1-2 cup raisins added, pinch of salt, 1 teaspoon vanilla, all beat until creamy, turned into buttered pan, cooled, and cut in squares.

Two and Three Colors.
Time was, and not so long ago, when the more a custom kept to one color, the choicer it was. But no longer. Two, and even three colors which may or may not harmonize overly well, are even choicer. For instance, not grey coat, grey dress, grey hat, grey hose, grey bag, grey shoes, but grey coat, grey and red print dress, black hat, gunmetal hose, black shoes, black bag.

Cards and Calls.
In olden days when the caveman and his lady first thought of the value of being neighborly, sometimes a hunk of raw and dripping meat would be hurled into Neighbor Cave. Man's cave by his neighbor, which meant that neighbor had eaten all the bear or wolf he possibly could and he might as well give away the rest. That was the calling card of the Cave Age.

Today's calling cards are left between 3:30 and 4:30.

FLEXIBLE TARIFF IS THREAT.

Among the first witnesses called by the senate committee investigating the operation of the flexible tariff and the activities of the tariff commission was Thomas Walker Page, chairman of the commission in its early life. He is a democrat. He said he retired from the commission because he was opposed to the principle involved. He said:

"Business feels that it is under a constant threat and can not make future operations."

"The flexible tariff is a deterrent to business and adds a speculative element that is highly undesirable."

"It has subjected the president to the charge of tinkering or refusing to tinker with the tariff for political reasons."

When the last tariff law was enacted provision was made for a change in rate by the president, who should have gathered for him and recommendations made to him by a tariff commission. The tariff commission was born of a school of theorists who advised that the tariff should not be a political issue, that it should be taken out of politics and should be revised along scientific rather than political lines. The fact that prior experiments had failed of course had no effect upon the new advocates of the plan. The proposals came more from the anti-protectionists than from the protectionists.

New conditions confronted the government when the Fordney-McCumber law was enacted and it seemed advisable to republican leaders to make provision for changes by the president. Questions had arisen about the manner of valuations under the fluctuating currency of European governments. We were just out of the war and industry was far from a solid foundation. Readjustments were bound to follow. In view of such a situation the leaders deemed it advisable to leave the opening for readjustment of tariffs by the president, probably without thought that any extensive revisions would be made. Although President Coolidge has changed rates only slightly, it is said that he has considered it desirable to leave the opportunity for a change.

On principle Mr. Page is correct. Any impending tariff change is a threat to business. The change may be upward or downward, and either vitally affects the trade of the articles under consideration. President Coolidge as a protectionist has not undertaken to reduce tariff schedules, but in the interest of the American farmer and American industry he either has sustained present tariffs or has increased them. Now that his tendencies as a protectionist are known, the flexible tariff is less of a threat against business. It is merely a matter of administration. With a president opposed to the theory of protection the result would be the opposite. That is the fallacy of pretending to have a nonpartisan commission. The commission should be in accord with the administration, which must take full responsibility.

Although the president has believed that in unsettled conditions the flexible tariff provides a safety valve, on principle the tariff commission has few defenders. Republicans never did care for it, and democrats are not satisfied with its operation.

Indications are that this, the third or fourth trial of such a body, will be enough to satisfy the appetites of tariff reformers and something new will be proposed.

"Don't cry," said Nancy. "Shed. You can stand a good bit. But come along. We'd better be moving."

Pretty soon they came to a Totem Pole.

The Totem Pole had six faces and when the three travelers came along all the faces opened their mouths and said, "How do you do?" at once.

The Twins and the Whiffet were too surprised to answer for a minute, but finally Nancy got out, "We're pretty well, thank you." And dropped a curtsy.

"That's fine," said the first face on the Totem Pole. "And now what can we do for you?"

"I lost my shadow and Mister Snoopsy stole it," said the Whiffet. "Do you know where he is?"

"I'll ask my next neighbor," said the first face. So he asked the second face and the second face said, "I'll ask my next neighbor." And each face said the same thing until the last face was reached at the top. And it said, "Mister Snoopsy jumped over the moon last night and sprained his leg. He's gone to the doctor's."

The next face passed down the word to the next one and so on down the pole to the bottom. Then the bottom face said to the Whiffet, "He's gone to the doctor's."

"What doctor's?" asked the Whiffet. And all the faces asked, "What doctor's?" on up until it came to the last face.

"Let me see," said that one. "I think it was his leg he sprained, so likely it was the carpenter instead of the doctor."

"Likely it was the Carpenter instead of the Doctor?" went on down the line until the answer got to the bottom.

"I want my shadow!" whimpered the Whiffet. "Is the South Pole far?"

GHOSTS OF KISSES
 "In the years that I have lived," continued this brilliant speaker, "I have found that only happy marriages are possible when the wife does the thing her husband wants her to just as she must obey her boss in an office or a store. The women of the new generation do not seem to think the game is worth the candle."

"Tonight I knew that I did not want to settle down to a married life. A woman cannot be free after she is married. She must live up to the rules and obey her boss, and, unlike a business life, she cannot get out of her job by just resigning."

I wanted to have some experience outside the home just the same as men do. I did not want to marry until some man took me off my feet so that I would not think—only feel.

"Well," I said to myself with a weary smile, for I was dead tired and I just could not get to sleep. "I certainly am getting enough excitement to satisfy the most exacting person, man or woman."

As that thought came to me I also felt Jerry's mouth press hard upon my lips, and—and—all unknowingly I went to sleep. My nerves were lulled by the ghost of my lover's kisses, the kisses that I was not sure that I really loved; the lover whose kisses would never grow unwanted because the moment I did not want them I could say goodbye for I would not be bound to him by ties I would not be legally break.

The next morning Mame came into my room just as I was getting ready to go to my job at the Morton Department store.

"Did you sleep any last night, Judy?" she asked.

"A little," and I smiled as I realized what had sent me to sleep.

"I didn't, Judy. I was thinking all night about what I should do with mother. What would you do?"

"Don't ask me a question like that, my dear," I remonstrated. "I am sure you have already decided to take up your music again. I really think that I should do the same if I had your voice. But you know as well as I that if you go back to New York your mother will have all the anathema of the Catholic church hurled against you."

"I know it, Judy. I know it. And the awful thing about it is that I am not sure that she will not be right in doing so. I haven't yet made up my mind whether we of the newer generation are right or whether the old is."

BRITTON I. BUDD, PRESIDENT OF THE CHICAGO RAPID TRANSIT COMPANY, SAYS:

THAT within the comparatively short period since the close of the World's War, a virtual rebirth of the electric railway industry has been witnessed, it having been transformed into a transportation business embracing all forms of transit other than steam.

THAT the recovery in the industry is almost without a parallel in American business, and has been accompanied by remarkable changes in equipment and improved service to the public, and also by widely increasing patronage.

THAT very rapidly economic absurdities written into franchises, which prevent some companies from having proper credit such as enables them to progress and properly serve the public, are being adjusted and regulatory authorities now appreciate that what the public wants is service rather than slickly-drawn contracts which are impossible of observance.

THAT a fixed rate of fare throughout the country will never again be seen, anymore than will a fixed, nationwide price for shoes. The making of street car riders pay for paving used by private automobilists is a practice rapidly passing.

Communities are expecting that the electric railway company, as an established agency and with skilled organization and financial responsibility, shall provide the entire local transportation, whatever the changing conditions may necessitate, and that those electric railways which are properly located and who keep pace with the times and provide speed and convenience comparable with the private automobile, have a bright future ahead of them.

CUBS AND YANKS LEAD LEAGUE IN HITTING THE BALL

White Sox Best Fielders in American; Ruth Going Strong

Chicago, May 22—(AP)—Any reduction in the part of George Herman Ruth during spring training is not reflected in the shadow. The Babe again is casting wherever three strikes are an out and a ball driven over the fence or into the bleachers on the other side of the field is good for four bases.

After all, smart hitting brings the fans to their feet more often than does smart fielding, and the Yankee slugger is the outstanding batsman among the several major leaguers currently chasing pennants.

Ruth's remarkable home run hitting is part of a batting performance seldom seen. When he hit his thirteenth and fourteenth circuit drives in last Wednesday's game, he jumped way ahead of his homer slugging in 1921, when the record of 59 was made. The thirteenth put him on a par with his total on May 25 in 1921. Additionally, The Babe ranks second in the American individual batting with a percentage of .338, and so far has averaged considerably more than two bases per hit, with a total of 93 bases on 44 bingles, which is pretty efficient. In last Wednesday's game he crossed the plate with his fortieth run, and that total in 31 games.

Cubs Lead National
The Yankees generally are showing both leagues how to hit, leading the American team averages with .324. Chicago has clung to a .294 percentage to stay in second place and Washington continues third with a rating of .291. The Chicago Cubs forged ahead to lead the National teams with hitting of .296 variety, the Reds having slipped into second place with .286. The Giants finished the first five weeks with an average of .281.

Joe Dugan leads the individual hitting in the majors with an average of .414, with his team-mate Ruth and Meusel ranking just below in the junior league. Southworth of the Giants tumbled from his wide-margin lead over everybody to lead the National batsmen with .406. Otherwise a number of new faces show among the leading hitters in both leagues, although the veterans hold their own. Rogers Hornsby, slugging playing-manager of the Cardinals whom St. Louis honors today, is hitting .355 in the National, slightly below the batting of the veteran Cobb with his .358 to date.

Cuyler of the Pirates continues to outclass them all, his ten pilfered sacks being two above the total acquired by Meusel in Yankee games.

Bottomley of the Cardinals leads the consolation race for home runs with seven, closely pressed by several players in each league who have collected four and five apiece.

White Sox Field Well
The White Sox have made the best fielding record in either league so far this year, the St. Louis Browns looking worse than any other team, on paper, but in spite of that having the lead in one-two putouts with a total of 42 doubles.

Donohue of the Reds rates the most effective pitcher in the National League, with Keen and Rhem, both Cardinal flingers, close behind, among the hurlers who labor often. Pennock Hoyt and Shocker of the Yankees and Quinn of the Athletics, closely followed by Walter Johnson, lead among American moundmen. Both Donohue and Pennock have so far won six and lost one game.

Leading American hitters in 15 or more games: Dugan of New York, .414; Ruth, New York, .393; Meusel, New York, .392; Bennett of St. Louis, .390; Cobb of Detroit, .388; McNeely, Washington, .385; Goslin of Washington, .376; Simmons, Athletics, .355; Burns, Cleveland, .352; Neun of Detroit, .350.

Leading National hitters in 15 or more games including Wednesday's: Southworth, Giants, .406; Bressler, Cincinnati, .388; L. Wilson of Chicago, .385; High of Boston, .380; Heathcote of Chicago, .375; Lindstrom, New York, .374; Dean of the Phillies, .364; Herman of Brooklyn, .358; Hornsby of St. Louis, .355; Cuyler, Pittsburgh, .342.

CARPENTIER IS STILL SHOWMAN WITH HIS DUKES

Fights a Courageous Draw With Two-Fisted Sailor Boy

New York, May 22—(AP)—Georges Carpentier, orchid man of France, is still a great fast showman. He demonstrated that when he fought a courageous ten round draw with Eddie Hoffman, blonde California sailor lad, at Madison Square Garden last night.

It was a battle between a rugged youth with a two fisted attack and a cagey veteran with a flashing right. One of the judges cast his ballot for Carpentier, the other for Hoffman while the referee refused to give either a margin.

The fight itself sparkled with thrills. Carpentier could not set himself for the right which would have stopped the Californian. Hoffman took all that Georges tossed his way and paid him back in full. But Hoffman's failure to follow up an advantage in the fifth and sixth rounds saved Carpentier from losing the verdict.

In the fifth Hoffman caught Carpentier coming in with a whistling right, crossed with his left and then shifted to the body. The bell saved Georges. In the sixth, the sailor lad waited for Carpentier to come to him and Georges profited by this delay. Hoffman appeared stronger at the finish.

Blood flowed from Hoffman's mouth, but Carpentier's face was unmarked.

BY EDWARD CLARK

"BROKEN HEARTS OF HOLLYWOOD" with Louise Dresser is a Warner picturization of this novel.

CHAPTER I

The steel rails of the Transcontinental Line were a curving rainbow arcing toward the pot of gold that was Hollywood, yet even this shining promise of California straight ahead was temporarily forgotten in the sudden and peaceful sense of being "at home" that came to the day dreams of the lone girl traveller on the Los Angeles Limited.

It was uncanny that these alien fields, upon which she had never set eyes before, seemed as vaguely familiar as some turned back page. Pressing on her consciousness from the first instant her train had rushed into the Valley was a delicate weight, as of the forecast shadow of a coming event. Always on the doorstep of great changes in individual human destinies there comes a subtle omen of something about to happen—a mysterious breath from a newly opened room of the eternal future.

The shy wayfarer, with hair the color of harvest wheat tops and cheeks the tint of plucked roses and the texture of appleskin, pressed a cameo nose against the fortunate windowpane and stared with strangely quickened interest at the fleeting train scene of Iowa farmlands.

Valleys are so rare in that flat corner of Iowa that the surprise of this perfect sylvan vista was pronounced. Locked in a shaggy paw of unexpected hills the Valley lay like a green chalice into which the sun poured the melted lemons of its light, while the whipped cream of puffy clouds dripped over the supping rim.

She had never known much of a home or of home life, this orphan whose face bore the fresh charm and the hopeful ambitions of twenty, but whose eyes precociously reflected the thwarted wisdom of two score years. Perhaps, therefore, it was a chronic nostalgia that read in the greatest novels, all the quaint homelands she had seen on the mellow canvases of the greatest paintings, were summed up in this lovely town of the mid western plains. The place overpowered her for a moment with so poignant a sense of quietude and home that her hands moved in an involuntary gesture toward her suitcase as the train slid to its appointed stop.

Then she remembered—and laughed uneasily. She became conscious of a vista of upturned faces outside; of a milling crowd untoward in even so small a town for the most important event of each day—the passing of the Limited. Something out of the ordinary was plainly afoot. As the noise of creaking wheel trucks and hissing air brakes died down it blended into a confused clatter of tin and whang of gut—a village band in gala blast.

The girl, in common with her weary fellow passengers, hurried toward the door, as much to see what all the commotion was about as to stretch their aching bound legs. Descending to the platform beside the grinning porter, they gazed with lively interest upon the animated scene at the end of the station, where an enthusiastic crowd of townspeople surrounded a group of three—a tall young man, a pretty girl and an elderly woman who was crying without embarrassment. When a small town celebrates there is a spontaneity and an intense concentration that in cities is unknown and impossible. Centipede had on its best bib and tucker this day. Even the drab depot was faced with a sheet of hunting that gave the impression of a multi-colored napkin stuck in the vest of a stout man.

Everyone in the crowd seemed to be talking at once—shouting. What with the jangle of the band, however, it was impossible to catch a stirred her. Or was it some in-bred strain of romance tumbling through her eager pulses? Whichever or whatever it laid gentle hold upon her heartstrings. Dreaming over the verdant prospect, the wistful journeyer experienced that rare ecstasy which fills humans identifying old friends; which thrills a hunter in from the hills at the purpling end of a winter's day when he spies the figure of his well-beloved outlined in living welcome against a yellow patch of cabin doorway; which thrills a sailor straining his eyes from the tops when the blue marge of homeland trembles on the horizon.

The locomotive whistle vibrantly heralding a stop jolted the girl out of her reveries; startled her back to the reality of many long hours of travel still ahead. This could not be Journey's End.

"What town are we coming to, Aloysius?" she inquired as the fat colored porter waddled past with the ever-ready scepter of his office—an oversize whisk broom.

"Centipede, missy—Centipede, Lo-way, an' we stop here 'bout ten minutes to take on water."

The monarch of the Pullman grinned expansively upon the little girl, who, for want of someone with whom to talk, had confided the joyous secret of her journey to him soon after the train had left Chicago. Aloysius in turn had whispered it to every other person in the car, so that the mysterious young beauty had been a target for the envious yet friendly glances of the women and admiring looks of the men passengers ever since.

Centipede, Iowa! Nothing romantic about that name! And yet, with the aura of her peculiar day dream still lingering over her the girl did not relax her intimate interest in the scenery. Open fields were giving way now to shady streets, wide and gray. Towering trees, the great pines that fasten human hearts to home soils, nodded over the village cottages, which were prim and white—each with its picket fence, like a starched ruff around a newly laundered shirt.

All the dear villages she had word of what they were saying or of any hint as to the nature of the celebration. But inasmuch as the tall young man had his arm around the pretty girl's shoulder and from time to time kissed her immoderately it was not difficult for the interested passengers to reach a conclusion.

"Just married!" the smirk went from one to another. The lone girl traveller reserved a thought to herself. "And he's rather good looking too."

"Lord turn me white," chuckled Aloysius through his thick lips. "If that boy ain't the town sheik—and I don't mean maybe."

"Guess his shaking days are over," smiled the girl, who felt the twinge of jealousy that every romantically inclined unmarried female always feels when she sees another handsome man married off—to someone other than herself.

For, contrary to traditional belief, it is only the men who are the least white interested in "seeing the bride."

The lone girl traveller moved away now toward the front of the station, where she enjoyed a brisk turn or two in grateful relief after many hours of uninterrupted riding.

Not until she saw the giant Mallard, its tank filled to overflowing, sliding back to be re耦omped to the train did she retrace her steps toward her own car at the rear end. Most of the other passengers had already returned aboard. The celebrating villagers were moving with the young couple toward the steps where honeymooners were to be her car mates! Well, that would be interesting; and it would serve to divert her from the limelight of passenger curiosity which had grown to be just a bit of a bore.

She hurried to board ahead of the honeymooners, not wanting to get caught in the swirling crowd. It was nip and tuck, for Aloysius was warning them to hurry. She made it first, but alas for speed!—she caught her heel on a step and fell back plumb into the arms of the handsome bridegroom.

ERNEST LYNN, author of THE YELLOW STUB

BEGIN HERE TODAY

JOHN MILBURN, partner in the advertising agency of GRAHAM AND MILBURN, hails the birth of a baby girl to his wife, FAY, as a big event and the turning point in their marriage.

John is of a romantic nature, which finds an outlet in the advertising copy he writes. He is impractical. In his family Fay runs the budget, just as in the advertising business the financial details are run by NA. THANEIL GRAHAM, his partner. The firm is small, but promising. There is one artist, BRIGGS, and a secretary, MISS KNEISEL.

While Fay is in the hospital, John is invited to a swimming party at the country place of PAT FORBES and his wife. There he meets several friends of the Forbes', all of whom are married. One of them, NELL ORME, attracts John by the striking picture she makes in a bathing suit. Pat Forbes hints of trouble between Nell and her husband, HOWARD, and later John accepts Nell's challenge to a swimming race.

"Most marriages are a mistake. Mine is."

but he couldn't risk hiding a supply up here. He tried it once, but Elmer Fry stole them all. Now all we have is cigars.

"They smoked in silence for a few minutes. Finally she said, 'You said this baby was your first one, didn't you?'"

"First offense," he smiled. "I know you're thrilled, aren't you?" she asked.

"Well—yes, I am," he said honestly.

She was silent again for a brief space. Then, "I adore babies," she remarked quietly and got to her feet.

There was nothing he could say to this, although he thought for a minute of asking, "Why don't you have one, then?"

Without another word, she flashed off the diving board again, and once more he was held in a swift rush of admiration at the beauty of it.

He dived off after her, but there were no more words between them. She was swimming silently and powerfully and he grew tired trying to keep up with her.

Finally he stood up in shallow water. "I'm all in," he called to her, and walked up on the beach, waiting.

When she joined him, he said apologetically, "The man who spoke of woman as the weaker sex had things twisted, I'm afraid."

She laughed softly. "Did I tire you?" Walking beside him, she tripped in the sand and would have fallen, but he was quick with his arms and caught her, his hands gripping the firm flesh of her arms.

"You're not so weak yourself," she laughed when she had regained her balance, and he relaxed his grip on her and murmured an unintelligible apology for his roughness.

When they got back to the fire, Mrs. Fry and Marian Forbes had rejoined the men.

"Did you enjoy your swim?" asked Marian, and John answered, "Yes."

"I'll bet she gave you a stomach full," jeered Fry, who was eating toasted marshmallows.

"She did that, all right," admitted John, and laughed. "She's the best swimmer I ever saw."

Nell, standing near the warming fire, bowed elaborately at his speech.

and Smith, who was flat on his back and smoking a fat cigar, said, "I could beat her if I wasn't so lazy." A moment later he was growling at Fry, who had thrown sand in his face and ordered him to "quit bragging."

John moved over nearer the fire to dry out for the night air was growing chilly. He was a tall, lank figure, his bathing suit, longish of arm and leg, although giving the appearance of a certain wiry strength and plenty of energy.

He sat down, drawing his knees up to his chin, and held out his hands to the blaze.

"Have a marshmallow," offered Mrs. Smith, reaching him one of the hot, browned confections on the end of a stick, and Mrs. Fry chirped up, saying, "We were arguing over the color of your hair, Mr. Milburn. What is it?"

"Henna!" snorted Fry, and smacked Smith resoundingly on his plump stomach. The tortured fat man, goaded beyond endurance, pursued the laughing Fry around in a circle, finally caught him and threw him to the ground, where he plucked at on him and rubbed the other's scalp roughly with his knuckles.

"It's Auburn," insisted Marian Forbes, referring once more to John's hair.

"That's a polite adjective," smiled John, "for red—dark red."

"It looks black, now that it's wet," said Howard Orme, breaking one of his long silences, and his wife exclaimed, "I wish I had it!"

John looked at her curiously. "Well," he said at length, "there are more interesting things to talk about," and flushed in embarrassment.

"John, I believe you're blushing," jeered Pat Forbes.

"No, you're wrong, Pat," he retorted. "It's just the freight on my face."

"He's reached for another marshmallow. 'Give me one, too,'" called Smith from his comfortable perch a ride the protesting Fry. "Shut up, you mud eating wampus!"

"She did that, all right," admitted John, and laughed. "She's the best swimmer I ever saw."

Nell, standing near the warming fire, bowed elaborately at his speech.

Pat Forbes was weak with laughter.

ter. The longer Smith sat on the fallen Fry, the funnier it grew—to all save the unfortunate victim—and he had been sitting there a full ten minutes.

"I'm afraid I'll have to be neutral," said John. "If I see the situation getting really critical, I'll interfere." Smith said nothing, but chewed contentedly on a marshmallow.

Nell Orme ran over and pushed against Smith but could not budge him. The triumphant fat man shouted in Fry's ear, "Say uncle and I'll let you up."

"Never!" hissed the fallen man. "I have but one life to live for my country and—" but Smith had silenced him with a handful of sand, and the rest of the sentence was lost in loud spluttering.

Nell Orme had started singing, and Pat Forbes had joined in, singing baritone to her lead. "Come on, John," urged Pat, "give 'em a little of that well-known tenor."

John laughed and shook his head. "My pipes are rusty, Pat."

"Aw, come on," Forbes grabbed him by the arm, and John was drafted.

They sang "Deep River," John's tenor sounding plaintively above the rest, and Smith suddenly got up off the breathless Fry. "Think I'll blow a little tin," he rumbled and moved over to the trio.

"Let's give 'em 'Sweet Adeline,'" he urged.

Pat scorned him. "Outside, bozo. This is real high-class stuff."

"Come on," insisted Smith, "sing something I know. Let's have 'I've Been Working on the Railroad.'"

"Oh, well," said Pat, "anything to please the roughneck," and they sang Smith's selection. John was surprised to find that Smith possessed a really fine bass voice.

"Come on, Smitty, give us 'Asleep in the Deep,'" commanded Forbes.

Mr. A. Meredith came Saturday for a visit at the home of his son Mr. and Mrs. LaForrest Meredith. He has spent the past two years at the home of his son Ira in Pocahontas, Idaho. He is looking well and hearty for a man of his advanced age. He is on his way to Baltimore, Md., where he will visit relatives.

The church night and supper of the Methodist church was held Tuesday night. Rev. and Mrs. Lumsden of Dixon were present. Rev. Lumsden, the district superintendent, gave a splendid address. It is unfortunate that the supper and Rev. Lumsden had not been advertised as no doubt a larger number would have been present had it been known more widely.

D. C. Hussey was a Chicago visitor over the week end.

Editor Hubert Bancroft of Durrant, Ill., was in town Sunday greeting former friends. He reports that his father and mother are in California visiting their son, Rev. Zena Bancroft.

Born to Mr. and Mrs. Leroy Hunt, May 19, a daughter.

At the Brethren church Sunday an all day missionary home-coming program was held in honor of the return of their foreign missionary, Mrs. Bertha Lehnman Butterbaugh, who with her family returned from India Wednesday night after over six years of service. Mrs. Butterbaugh is the daughter of Mrs. Mary Lehnman of this place. After her marriage to Rev. Andrew Butterbaugh they left for India. A large crowd was present during the day. Very impressive services were held in the morning and a scramble dinner at noon, after which a picture was taken of the entire crowd to be sent to Miss Mae Wolf who is a Missionary to India and a former member of the Brethren church. During the day a letter was read by Mrs. Butterbaugh from Miss Wolf, who is the daughter of E. J. Wolf of this place. The Brethren people of this place have just reason to be proud that two of their young lady members saw fit to give themselves to the work of the Foreign field and especially India. Most of the time was spent in listening to Rev. and Mrs. Butterbaugh tell of their work and experiences in India. They expect to return to their work in India in about eighteen months.

Monday about one o'clock the fire bell rang, notifying the people that there was a fire. It was soon located at the Brethren church just northwest of town. A group of ladies of the church were working in the basement washing up the dishes that had been used on Sunday for the reception for the Butterbaugh family who were missionaries to India. Waste paper had been put in the furnace which it is supposed started the fire. The west wind fanned the flames and very soon the entire roof was ablaze. The local fire department, recently reorganized, responded to the alarm with two ladders of hose, hook and ladder, etc., as did about one hundred other men who were not members of the company. The larger part of the interior furnishings, especially those on the main floor were saved. The horse was attached at the Humphrey corner, but the fire had gotten too much headway to be able to even quench it for a time. Burning embers were carried to the east end of town and considerable fear was felt for the buildings near by, as it was the roof was burned from the barn on the John Buck place two blocks away from the church, also the roof on the Joshua Reed house caught fire, but the efforts of the men saved these two places. The Brethren church was one of the best planned churches in this part of the state for Sunday school work and it is a regrettable fact that was burned. The church was built in 1879. ing needs of the Sunday school and to better facilitate the Sunday school work, the church house was remodelled in 1905; and in 1913 a valuable addition was built to better meet the needs of the Sunday school work, the Christian Workers' Society and the Ladies Aid. Insurance was carried on the building, but it could not be replaced for four times that amount today. For the next two Sundays the Brethren people will worship in the auditorium at the camp grounds.

Mrs. Nellie Hatch, Mr. and Mrs. Sans and family of Rock Falls were Sunday visitors at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Hatch.

OBITUARY

MRS. Wm. CHIVERTON

Lyndon—Sarah Elizabeth Shilcock was born Nov. 25, 1847, at Tugby, Leicestershire, England, the only daughter of William and Mary Shilcock. In the family were three brothers who died years ago in England.

She was married to Cornelius Osborne Nov. 24, 1867, at St. George's Episcopal church, London. Mr. and Mrs. Osborne came to America in 1872, locating at Dixon, and coming later to Lyndon where they established their family home in the fall of 1875.

Of their nine children six grew to manhood and womanhood, three dying in childhood. The children living are: Mary Eleanor, wife of Arthur McKenzie, Sterling; Oliver Osborne, Lyndon; William Leicester, Erie; Zoe, wife of William Latham, Honolulu, Hawaiian Islands; Ethel, wife of E. C. Tobey, Rock Island; Edna, who married Jesse Weyant of Dixon, died in 1906. Ten grandchildren and one great granddaughter survive her. Mr. Osborne died on Nov. 22, 1893 and was laid to rest on their wedding anniversary.

On March 8, 1899, she was married to William Chiverton, at Dixon, and after Mr. Chiverton's death, April 8th, 1902, Mrs. Chiverton returned to her old home at Lyndon, since then living near and with her sons.

In her youth Mrs. Chiverton united with the Episcopal church of England, but on coming to Lyndon she united with the Lyndon Congregational church continuing her membership to the time of her death. She was a charter member of the local M. W. W. lodge and a long-time member of Rock River chapter No. 350, O. E. S., of Lyndon.

Long and Eventful Life
Mrs. Chiverton's life was long and eventful, but the pen is not enough, nor do words half tell it. Would that one had the tongue of an orator to broadcast the praise of a life such as hers. Born across the sea into a home of education and refinement, she had many cherished remembrances to tell of her old English home. In the book of her life are records of kindly deeds, of days and night's spent in the sick room ministering to the invalid's wants or of bestowing comfort to the sorrowing when death removed a loved one. The last four years she devoted her time to caring for Oliver's motherless children, Oscar and Mary, whose mother was taken from them in babyhood. The place to which she was most devoted and loved the best was home.

Last of Old Friends
By her death is removed the last of a coterie of families in her neighborhood, neighbors bound together by the common tie of kindred fellowship, neighbors who reared large families, struggled to maintain their homes and placed in them a few of the comforts and refinements of life; Mothers who toiled and sacrificed and were rewarded by seeing the sons and daughters who played together and grew up together, become an honor to their early teachings.

In closing this brief sketch of Mrs. Chiverton's life two notions come to mind, lessons of love and forgiveness, which she often quoted to her own and other children: "Live and let live" and "Do unto others as you would have others do unto you."

The funeral was held on Tuesday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock at the Congregational church, Rev. P. H. Mason, the pastor, speaking words of comfort to the mourners, choosing as his text Matt. 26:10. Mrs. Grace Teach and Mrs. Lola Sharpe sang two beautiful numbers, Mrs. Millikan at the piano. The pallbearers were the sons-in-law and grandsons. Burial was in the family lot in the Lyndon cemetery. A profusion to choice floral offerings silently spoke of love and esteem.
